Describe the biggest thing you want to change during this New Year

When the pastors talked about the faith self-assessment bookmark for this series, what stood out about your own self-assessment?

Connect Members to God

For too long the church's response to young people was to sit in the back, be still, and stay quiet. In fact, that's what being a good church kid kind of meant. However raising up the next generation requires helping them grow and mature into leaders. Jesus raised up his disciples by inviting them to follow him and eventually getting them to do the ministry themselves.

How would you describe your faith when you were a kid?

Who was someone that invested in your faith when you were young?

What could it look like to disciple others the way Jesus did?

Apply the Teaching

The next generation notices when your Christian life is in sync with your Christian belief. They also notice when it is not. The example we set is critical for Christian parents and Christian leaders. Passing on the faith to the next generation requires walking the talk.

What do you think led to the rapid decline of interest in church in Europe?

Why do you think churches in America are beginning to experience a similar pattern?

What can we do to make sure our churches stay vibrant?

How might God be calling you to invest in the next generation?
